Resting Breath Hold (RBH) almost never fails to improve during first week. If RBH did fail to improve (or got worse which is even more rare), please re-read your RBH test instructions (in the same email this document was attached to. Usually a reduction can be tracked to a failure to oxygen load consistently with the past RBH test, or taking under different conditions.

Comments: Please write as much as you would like in the space below.
 I think that maybe I am not seeing as good results since my wife and I are sharing the EP in the middle of the bed like you gave her instructions.

We are still sharing the unit because my wife has several problems that we are trying to see if it helps. I am having some strange dreams a few times a week.

While I don't think the device did much for me or my RBH, having used the EM-Probe for years, I did not expect much. I was mostly interested in the EP for my wife. I think it will make a difference with her health, but it will just take some more time.

I wish you would have corresponded back to as to whether there would have been any possible reactions with me still using the EM-Probe while also sleeping on the EP. There were no reactions that I noticed.

My wife did mention that she sleeps deeper, but still gets up several times in the night. She did mention that a couple of nights throughout the 90 days that she slept so hard and was dreaming that she was having to go the bathroom and woke to actually having done it. (I told her she was getting old and needed Depends...she didn't appreciate that since she is only 49yrs young) She had never experienced that before. Her health problems include hypothyroid, fatty liver, and a distended gallbladder. She has not seen a decrease in her thyroid medicine as of yet, but again we are sleeping with the unit between us like you had told her in an e-mail so that we could both benefit from it. She just had a Doctors appointment today (Oct 3) and had her blood drawn, so we wont know what the results are for a week. She has lost 13 lbs, but that can possibly be attributed to being put on Armour thyroid and the EP and not having an appetite since she is in pain on and off with the gallbladder. She did try to put the unit on the area of her gallbladder for an hour (like you had mentioned for her to try but after that she was in extreme pain. So she hasn't done it since.

Thanks.
Richard and Sheila Weyrick
